one time and hook it one time," Anderson said.
 Cirrincione's family, friends, volunteers from the Mother's Day search and law enforcement looked on as MSHP Recovery Team divers assisted the semi-truck wrecker in pulling the vehicle out of the Gasconade.

Divers entered the water and hooked a cable onto the sunken vehicle.

The Jeep was slowly pulled up until another cable could be hooked onto it to add a second, more sturdy line, by the MSHP Recovery Team.

Once both cables were attached on-lookers were able to observe the final process of recovering the vehicle.

Anderson expressed relief that searchers were able to find Cirrincione and her vehicle Wednesday because the weather forecast is calling for more rain over the next few days and said, "The good Lord shined on us today."

"Our job is to help the family find closure and we've done that," Anderson said of the end of the search.

Cirrincione had been missing since April 28.
